The trajectory of the profession is changing daily; tough economic times have made creative career choices a must.

Our membership is defining and redefining itself, identifying new opportunities, and finding their place within the structure of the new economic landscape. In order to support ourselves financially....in order to find professional and personal fulfillment....out of necessity or creative imperative, we as professionals have begun to do things other than what has traditionally defined the Architect. This exhibition is an exploration of personal journeys..... between architecture and Doing Other Things.

The exhibit, features 30 women who have employed their training in the architectural profession and reinvented their careers. Using a pre-formatted 14" x 24" layout, the participants trace the path to their new opportunities employing photos and personal stories.

This exhibit was curated by Mindy Viamontes on behalf of Chicago Women in Architecture. Printing was generously donated by the IDM-Group.
